Disclosure statement RE: An Analysis of Economic Warfare

1) I have no financial interests linked to either this paper's conclusions or its underlying analysis. In previous years I have received funding from the Department of Homeland Security, the Rumsfeld Foundation, the Institute for Humane Studies, and the Taubman Center for State and Local Government at Harvard University. I have also been a salaried employee of the Stanford Institute for Economic Policy Research and the University of California at San Diego. All funding has come in the form of salary or general graduate student support and was not linked to the execution of this particular project.

2) Over the last three years I have not received funding in the form of consultant fees, retainers, grants and the like in excess of $10,000 from any one party, interested or otherwise.

3) I am not an officer, director, or board member of a relevant entity, either non-profit or for profit.

4) I have no relatives or partners with interests in the findings of this paper.

5) No outside parties have the right to review the contents of this paper prior to submission or publication.
