

Benoît SCHMUTZ, PhD
Assistant Professor
Howard University
Academic Support Building B
2400 6th Street, N.W.
Washington, DC 20059
Tel: (202) 806-9895
Mail: benoit.schmutz@howard.edu

Washington, 12th of May 2014,

Ref: Disclosure Statement

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

The research entitled “Can Tax breaks beat geography? Lessons from the French Enterprise Zone experience”, co-authored by Anthony Briant (SG-CIV and Paris School of Economics), Miren Lafourcade (University Paris-Sud and Paris school of Economics), and Benoît Schmutz (Howard University) has benefited from a public grant by the French Ministry of Labor (Direction de l’Animation de la Recherche, des Etudes et des Statistiques or DARES) and the French Ministry of Urban Affairs (Secrétariat Général du Comité Interministériel des Villes or SG-CIV).

The access to the DADS and ENTD data used in this paper was carried out through a secured center dedicated to researchers authorized by the French National committee for statistical disclosure (Comité du Secret Statistique).

During the academic year 2011-2012, I have received a post-doctoral grant from the Paris region to carry on this research. In that respect, I had an obligation of means, but not an obligation of results, because the host institution during my post doctorate was the University Paris-Sud.

I declare that I have no relevant or material financial interest that relate to the research described in this paper.

Respectfully,

Benoît Schmutz