Steven J. Davis, disclosure statement for: "Why Has U.S. Policy Uncertainty Risen Since 1960?" By Baker, Bloom, Canes-Wrone, Davis and Rodden, January 2014

Over the past three years, I have:

- Received research funding from the Initiative on Global Markets at Chicago Booth, the Kauffman Foundation, the U.S. National Science Foundation, and the MacArthur Foundation. Support from the MacArthur Foundation is through a grant to the Becker-Friedman Institute for Research in Economics at the University of Chicago.
- Received honoraria for speaking and writing and/or compensation as a Visiting Scholar from the American Enterprise Institute, the Brookings Institution, and the Federal Reserve Banks of Chicago and Philadelphia.
- Received consulting fees from Discover Financial Services for assistance in developing stress test scenarios and for providing commentary on the macroeconomic outlook.
- Received compensation as an expert witness on behalf of a firm that manages trade shows in a contractual dispute involving the competitive relationships among various trade shows.
- Received the Addington Prize in Measurement awarded by the Fraser Institute for my work with Scott Baker and Nick Bloom on "Measuring Economic Policy Uncertainty".