

Disclosure statement
“Teacher Quality Policy When Supply Matters”
Jesse Rothstein

Funding

I am grateful to the Institute for Research on Labor and Employment at UC Berkeley for research funding.

Human subjects

This research did not involve human subjects and was not subject to IRB review.

Potential conflicts of interest

I served as senior economist at the Council of Economic Advisers in 2009-10 and participated in that capacity in discussions related to teacher evaluation policies.

In addition, I have received compensation for consulting to teacher’s unions and state Departments of Education regarding the design of teacher evaluations.

In late 2013, I was retained as an expert witness on value-added models by the California Teachers Association and California Federation of Teachers to testify in the Vergara v. California case regarding California’s teacher tenure and dismissal statutes. A portion of my testimony, delivered in early 2014, covered the analysis and results in this paper, as reported in a November 2013 draft that was completed before my retention. The final draft has only minor changes from that version; neither CTA nor CFT had any input into the revisions.

I have no further relevant or material financial interests that relate to the research described in this paper.