Author: Xavier Gabaix
Article: Power laws in economics: an introduction, submitted to the JEP

The author declares that he has no relevant or material financial interests that relate to the research described in this paper.

Over the past three years, I have consulted for academic and government institutions: New York Fed, Chicago U., Yale U.

I received a grant from the NSF and the Institute of New Economic Thinking (INET).

I received money for prizes awarded by: the American Finance Association (Fischer Black Prize), Le Monde / Cercle des économistes (best young French economist prize) , the OBCE (the Observatory of the European Central Bank: Bernacer Prize) and the CRT Foundation (Lagrange Prize for research on complex system).

I gave a talk to the "National Association of College and University Business Officers".

Those institutions have no material interest or influence on this research.
