

Ivan Moscati

Disclosure statement relative to the paper

“How Economists Came to Accept Expected Utility Theory. The Case of Samuelson and Savage.”

The author declares that:

- (i) The Fondazione Cariplo, a philanthropic organization based in Milan, Italy, and the European Society for the History of Economic Thought, a scientific society that promotes teaching and research in the history of economic thought in Europe, have provided financial support for the research described in this paper;
- (ii) Neither Fondazione Cariplo (www.fondazionecariplo.it/en/the-foundation/index.html) nor the European Society for the History of Economic Thought (<http://www.eshet.net>) have any relevant or material financial interests that relate to the research described in this paper;
- (iii) He himself has no relevant or material financial interests that relate to the research described in this paper;
- (iv) There are no interested parties from whom he has received any money;
- (v) Neither his spouse nor any other relative of his has any relevant or material financial interests that relate to the research described in this paper;
- (vi) He is not aware of any potential conflicts of interest related to the paper.

Varese, February 25, 2016

Ivan Moscati
Associate Professor of Economics
University of Insubria, Department of Economics
Via Monte Generoso 71, 21100 Varese (Italy)
+39 0332 395512
www.uninsubria.it/docenti/ivan.moscati